Ful scarce, God wote! is hir vitaile, Humble wyfes she fynt so fewe, For always at the cowntre-taile Theyr tunge clappithe and dothe hewe; Suche meke wyfes I be-shrewe, That neyther can at bedde ne boorde Theyr husbondes nat forbere oon woorde. But my foode and my cherisshynge, To telle plainly and nat to varye, Is of suche folke whiche theyr livynge Dare to theyr wyfes be nat contrayre, Ne from theyr lustis dare nat varye, Nor withe hem holde no champartye, Al suche my stomack wil defye. Than shal be portrayed a company of men comyng towardis this beste By corne, and sey these foure baladis. Felawes, takethe heede, and ye may see How Bycorne castithe hym to devoure Alle humble men, bothe yow and me, Ther is no gayne may us socoure: Woo be therfor, in halle and boure, To al these husbondes whiche theyr lives Maken maystresses of theyr wyfes. Who that so dothe, this is the lawe, That this Bycorne wil hym oppresse, And devouren in his mawe, That of his wife makithe his maystresse; This wil us bryng in grete distresse, For we, for oure humylite, Of Bycorne shal devoured be. We stonden plainly in suche case, That they to us maystressis be; We may wele syng, and seyn, allas! 2 That we gaf hem the soveraote; For we ben thralle and they be free; Wherfor Bycorn, this cruel beste, Wil us devouren at the lest. But who that can be soverayne, And his wife teche and chastise, That she dare nat a worde gayn-seyn, Nor disobeye in no manner wise; Of suche a man I can devise, He stant under protectioun, From Bycornes jurisdiccione. Than shal ther be a tvomman devoured in the mowthe of
