

Alps and Sanctuaries of Piedmont and the Canton Ticino

Most men will readily admit that the two poets who have the greatest hold over Englishmen are Handel and Shakespeare for it is as a poet, a sympathiser with and renderer of all estates and conditions whether of men or things, rather than as a mere musician, that Handel reigns supreme. There have been many who have known as much English as Shakespeare, and so, doubtless, there have been no fewer who have known as much music as Handel: perhaps Bach, probably Haydn, certainly Mozart; as likely as not, many a known and unknown musician now living; but the poet is not known by knowledge alone not by gnosis only but also, and in greater part, by the agape which makes him wish to steal mens hearts, and prompts him so to apply his knowledge that he shall succeed.
