Excerpt: ...falling On silver anvils, and the splash and stir Of fountains spouted up and showering down In meshes of the jasmine and the rose: And all about us peald the nightingale, Rapt in her song, and careless of the snare. There stood a bust of Pallas for a sign, By two sphere lamps blazond like Heaven and Earth With constellation and with continent, Above an entry: riding in, we calld; A plump-armd Ostleress and a stable wench Came running at the call, and helpd us down. Then stept a buxom hostess forth, and saild, Full-blown, before us into rooms which gave Upon a pillard porch, the bases lost In laurel: her we askd of that and this, And who were tutors. Lady Blanche she said, And Lady Psyche. Which was prettiest, Best-natured? Lady Psyche. Hers are we, One voice, we cried; and I sat down and wrote, In such a hand as when a field of corn Bows all its ears before the roaring East; Three ladies of the Northern empire pray Your Highness would enroll them with your own, As Lady Psyches pupils. This I seald: The seal was Cupid bent above a scroll, And oer his head Uranian Venus hung, And raised the blinding bandage from his eyes: I gave the letter to be sent with dawn; And then to bed, where half in doze I seemd To float about a glimmering night, and watch A full sea glazed with muffled moonlight, swell On some dark shore just seen that it was rich. As thro the land at eve we went, And pluckd the ripend ears, We fell out, my wife and I, O we fell out I know not why, And kiesd again with tears. For when we came where lies the child We lost in other years, There above the little grave, O there above the little grave, We kissd again with tears. n. At break of day the...
