What else was done to get money from the Americans? 18. What was done to force the Americans to pay money? What did the Assemblies do? 19. What did the king and Parliament do? 20. What then happened, and why? 21. What can you tell about Gates's arrival in Boston? Boldness of the Boston boys. Their demand for redress. The soldiers and citizens. government to force the Americans into obedience. They treated them as rebels, and in every way the Americans were irritated beyond endurance. Yet they acted manly and respectful, while they were firm and unyielding. 23. Even the children partook of the boldness of their fathers and mothers. On one occasion, in Boston, the soldiers had beaten down some snow-hills which the boys had raised. This had been done before, and the lads determined not to endure it longer. The larger boys held a meeting, and several of them were appointed to see General Gage about it. 24. When the boys entered Gage's room, he asked why so many children had called upon him. We come, sir, said the tallest boy, to demand satisfaction. What! said the general, have your fathers been teaching you rebellion, and sent you to exhibit it here? Nobody sent us, sir, replied the boy, while his eyes flashed, and his cheeks reddened, at being accused of rebellion. 25. The lad then told Gage how the soldiers had broken down their snow-hills, and how, when they complained, they were called young rebels. Yesterday, he continued, our works were destroyed the third time, and we will bear it no longer.

The general's heart was touched by the noble courag...
