Harmay From which our fires of worship rise! c But know--twas he I sought that night, When, from my watch-boat on the sea, . I caught this turrets glimmering light, And up the rude rocks desperately Rushd to my prey--thou knowst the rest--I climbd the gory vultures nest, And found a trembling dove within;--Thine, thine the victory--thine the sin--If Love hath made one thought his own, That vengeance claims first--last---alone! i Oh! had we never, never met, Or could this heart en now forget How linkd, how blessd we might have been, . Had fate not frownd so dark between, Hadst thou been born a Persian maid, In neighbouring valleys had we dwelt, Through the same fields in childhood playir, Al the same kindling altar knelt,--Then, then, while all those nameless ties, In which the charm of Country lies, Had round our hearts been hourly spun, Till Irans cause and thine were one;--While in thy lutes awakening sigh I heard the voice of days gone by, And saw in every smile of thine Returning hours of glory shine!--While the wrongd Spirit of our Land Livd, lookd, and spoke her wrongs through thee,--God! who could then tirs sword withstand? Its very flash were victory! But now--estrangd, divorcd forever, Far as the grasp of Fate can sever; Our only ties what love has wove,--Faith, friends, and country, sunderd wide;--And then, then only, true to ...
