The ends of all, who for the scene do write, Are, or should be, to profit and delight. And stillt hath been the praise of all best times, So persons were not touchd, to tax the crimes. Then, in this play, which we present to-night, And make the object of your ear and sight, On forfeit of yourselves, think nothing true: Lest so you make the maker to judge you, For he knows, poet never credit gaine By writing truths, but things (like truths) well feignd. If any yet will, with particular sleight Of application, wrest what he doth write; And that he meant, or him, or her, will say: They make a libel, which he made a play.
