Excerpt from book: who acted a lxtrotor betrayed no surprise when he saw the person who applied for admission, and every movement of the black denoted preparation and readiness for his reception. I Hvliung his invitation to enter, however, the Alderman placed his back against the iron railing of the stoop, and opened a discourse with the negro. The latter was aged, with a grizzled bend, nose that was levelled nearly to the plane of his face, features that wore wrinkled and confused, and with a form which, though still wlid, was bending with its load of years. u Brave cheer to tlurv. old Cupid ! commenced the burgher, in tho hearty and cordial manner with which the masters of that period were wont to address their indulged slaves. A clear conscience is a good night-cap, and you look bright as the morning sun ! I hope my friend the young Patroon has slept sound us yourself, and that he has shown his face already to prove it. The negro answered with the slow clipping manner that characterized his condition and years. Hem werry wakeful, Masser Alerman. I tink he no sleep half he time lately. All he ativorty and wiwacerty gone, anho do no singleting but smoke. A gentleum who smoke alway, Masser Alerman, get to be a melereholy man at last . I do Cink ere be one young lady in York who be he deaf some time ! Well find the means to get the pipe out of his mouth, said the other, looking askance at the black, as if to express more than he uttered. Romance and pretty girls play the deuce with our philosophy iu youth, as thou knowest by experience, old Cupid. I no good for any ting dat-a-way now, notimy, calmly returned the black. I see a one time, when few color man in York hab more respect among a fair see, but dat a great while gone
