Not illustrated. 1754 Excerpt: ...dedicated to Apollo and the Mufti..... (c) Bitterophon; Lat. Gr. i.e. A Murderer of Better, his Brother. Perseus the Son of Glaucus King of Corinth is so called. He was a noble Youth, and after many Exploits, being desirous of flying up to Heaven by the Help of his Horse, was cast down headlong by Jupiter; and by the Fall he was made blind. Then he lived a wandering Vagabond Life; like another Cain, and died with Hunger, about A. M. 2693. the the Aleian (d) Field, there to wander erroneous and forsaken: There yet remains Half unsung; but now I may find more safely of narrower Bounds, within the visible diurnal Sphere, standing upon the Earth, and not being carried away beyond this World; and though with mortal Voice, yet unchanged to hoarse or mute; though fallen upon evil Days and among evil Tongues, in Darkness, and encompassed round with Dangers and Solitude, yet am I not alone, while Thou visits my Slumbers nightly, or at earliest Break of Day. Do Thou great Spirit still direct and govern my Thoughts and Words, and though but a few, find for me a fit Audience. But drive far off the Revellers of Bacchus, the Race of that wild Rout, that tore Orpheus (e) to Pieces, in Woods where they and Rocks (it was said) had Ears, and were charmed, till the savage Clamour drowned both Harp and Voice; nor could his Harmony defend him: So fail not Thou who now implores Thee, for Thou art heavenly, and his feigned Muse only an empty Dream. Teach me to relate what followed,-when Raphael the sociable Arch-Angel, had forewarned Adam to beware of Apostacy, or Falling away from God into Sin, by a sad Example of what had befall in Heaven to those apostate Angels, left the like should befall in Paradise to him or to his Race, if they transgressed and flighted that only Comman...
