

The Truth About Pyecraft: (H G Wells Masterpiece Collection)

He sits not a dozen yards away. If I glance over my shoulder I can see him. And if I catch his eye and usually I catch his eye it meets me with an expression It is mainly an imploring look and yet with suspicion in it. Confound his suspicion! If I wanted to tell on him I should have told long ago. I don't tell and I don't tell, and he ought to feel at his ease. As if anything so gross and fat as he could feel at ease! Who would believe me if I did tell?
