

The Good News of God - Charles Kingsley

A passage from the book... Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. These words often puzzle and pain really good people, because they seem to put the hardest duty first. It seems, at times, so much more easy to love ones neighbour than to love God. And strange as it may seem, that is partly true. St. John tells us so - He that loves not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen? Therefore many good people, who really do love God, are unhappy at times because they feel that they do not love him enough. They say in their hearts - I wish to do right, and I try to do it: but I am afraid I do not do it from love to God. I think that they are often too hard upon themselves. I believe that they are very often loving God with their whole hearts, when they think that they are not doing so. But still, it is well to be afraid of oneself, and dissatisfied with oneself. I think, too - nay, I am certain - that many good people do not love God as they ought, and as they would wish to do, because they have not been rightly taught who God is, and what He is like. They have not been taught that God is loveable; they have been taught that God feels feelings, and does deeds, which if a man felt, or did, we should call him arbitrary, proud, revengeful, cruel: and yet they are told to love him; and they do not know how to love such a being as that. Nor do I either, my friends.
