

A Strange Island (classic edition)

One day I lay rocking in my boat, reading a very famous book, which all children know and love; and the name of which Ill tell you by and by. So busily was I reading, that I never minded the tide; and presently discovered that I was floating out to sea, with neither sail nor oar. At first I was very much frightened; for there was no one in sight on land or sea, and I didnt know where I might drift to. But the water was calm, the sky clear, and the wind blew balmily; so I waited for what should happen.
