

The Song of the Cardinal

A love story of the Limberlost. A story of rare charm by Gene Stratton-Porter. A love ideal of the Cardinal bird and his mate, told with delicacy, exquisite charm and keen understanding of bird life and humor. Gene Stratton-Porter's exquisite poem of bird life. -Current Literature and Current History, July, 1905 The Song of the Cardinal, Gene Stratton-Porter's first book, serves as a delightful introduction to the more than twenty others that she ultimately published along with numerous stories and articles in magazines. Stratton-Porter is one of the best-selling authors ever and her novels have never gone out of print. The fictional Cardinal that the book is about is actually a big male Cardinal who is redder and sings more loudly and more beautifully than any other Cardinal in the world. Moreover, it sings with such clarity that the literal meaning of its songs can be interpreted by human beings, primarily an old farmer and his wife who own the farm on which this bird resides. The Song of the Cardinal seems to be aimed at adults although its tone and intellectual level is more like that of a child's book. According to the film Voice of Limberlost it is based on a true experience in which the author finds a dead Cardinal shot by some fiend with a gun simply to test his aim. She picked up the bird and carried it home, formulating the story along the way. The book reveals the strength of her feelings toward nature and invokes religion as the main source of moral authority. The book is clearly intended to influence the behavior and attitudes of hunters and marksmen toward wild things, especially birds, and to invoke the fear of God into any reader who would willingly harm them. The strengths of this book are that nature is presented in an endearing way that might sensitize people on an emotional level to the need to preserve it. It calls attention to the moral dimensions of man's impact on nature.
