

Woodstock: or, the Cavalier

Now, if to these were added the diverse reall phantasms seen at Whitehall in Cromwells times, which caused him to keep such mighty guards in and about his bedchamber, and yet so oft to change his lodgings; if those things done at St. James, where the devil so joald the centinels against the sides of the queens chappell doors, that some of them fell sick upon it; and others, not, taking warning by it, kild one outright, whom they buried in the place; and all other such dreadful things, those that inhabited the royal houses have been affrighted with.
